Sonja Lampert

German born violinist Sonja Lampert grew up in South Africa, where she completed her studies under John Wille at the University of the Orange Freestate.

After obtaining her BMus she returned to Germany, where she was appointed as leader of the first violins in the Orchestra of the Mainfranken Theater Würzburg. Next to many soloistic activities with the leading orchestras in South Africa, as well as recordings for both radio and television, Sonja Lampert attended masterclasses by Dorothy Delay, Ruggiero Ricci, Albert Markov and Ronald Masin.

Amongst her appearances as a soloist with the Würzburg Philharmonic Orchestra, the most memorable were Ravel's "Tzigane" and most recently Leonard Bernstein's "Serenade after Plato's Symposium". Ms. Lampert also appears regularly in Chamber Music Concerts as well as Recitals.

She plays a D'Espine violin built in the 19th-century.
